NEW YORK, 17 July 2019 – Sotheby's and Stadium Goods are pleased to announce that 99 of 100 rarest sneakers ever produced have been acquired privately for $850,000.

Originally scheduled for an online-only auction closing on 23 July, Stadium Goods – the world's premier sneaker and streetwear marketplace – curated a selection of the most prized footwear from their famed Trophy Case - the most exclusive and coveted sneakers ever produced by Nike, Air Jordan, Adidas, Yeezy and more, spanning over 15 years of the most sought-after, limited edition drops in sneaker history.

International entrepreneur and collector Miles Spencer Nadal originally presented an offer to acquire the entire collection of 100 pairs, however the consignor of the Nike Moon Shoes preferred to keep the property available in public auction.

As a result, the 1972 Nike Waffle Racing Flat 'Moon Shoe' will remain open for bidding for one more week, until 23 July (estimate $110/160,000).

An avid car collector, entrepreneur, industrialist and philanthropist, Mr. Nadal plans to display the sneaker collection at his Dare to Dream Automobile Museum in Toronto, Canada – a private museum featuring an extensive collection of classic cars. Mr. Nadal plans to share the collection with friends, family and charitable organizations, upon request.

The complete exhibition of all 100 pairs will remain on public view at Sotheby's New York until 23 July.

Noah Wunsch, Sotheby's Global Head of eCommerce, commented: "It's clear from Mr. Nadal's comprehensive collection of iconic cars that he is someone with a strong interest in items of the highest standard of design and quality. To have a collector of his standing acquire such a significant collection is a testament to the present strength and future of the sneaker collecting category. Stadium Goods has been an exceptional partner throughout this process, and their curated selection of the finest sneakers ever produced has proven to be an irresistible offering."

This represents a key moment both for sneaker collecting and sneaker culture overall. We are proud and honored to have been able to partner with Sotheby's to bring Stadium Goods' passion for the culture of sneakers to new audiences."

Acquiring such a range of contemporary classics is a unique opportunity to build a substantial sneaker collection of iconic proportions. The collection will be a wonderful complement to the Dare to Dream classic car collection, and I am excited to showcase these magnificent sneakers."

An avid car collector and enthusiast, Mr. Nadal has acquired over 142 cars and 40 motorcycles which comprise the Dare to Dream Classic Car collection. The collection ranges from the first motorized car

HIGHLIGHTS FROM MR. NADAL'S COLLECTION

AIR JORDAN 11 'DEREK JETER'

To commemorate legendary New York Yankee short stop Derek Jeter's retirement in 2017, Jordan Brand produced only five pairs of the Air Jordan 11 – one of the rarest Air Jordan 11s releases of all time. Each were released via a scratch-off lottery system at a pop-up shop near Yankee Stadium on the day of his retirement ceremony. The colorway is constructed in a premium navy suede upper with Jeter's famed #2 embroidered on each heel in white.

CHANEL X PHARRELL X ADIDAS OWNED BY KARL LAGERFELD

Created by rapper Pharrell Williams in collaboration with Adidas and famed fashion house Chanel, the ultra-rare adidas NMD Hu TR was released only at a special Chanel pop-up shop at Colette in Paris in extremely limited quantities. Featuring a modified design that replaces “Chanel” across the top of the right shoe with “Karl”, this pair was given exclusively to Karl Lagerfeld as a gift from Pharrell. This “Karl” edition is thought to be the only pair in existence.

2011 AND 2016 - NIKE MAGS

Worn by Marty McFly in Back to the Future Part II, the once-fictional sneaker was released by Nike in 2011, following petitions from fans to create the mythical design. With only 1,500 pairs made, the limited-edition shoe was one of the most significant sneaker releases in history. Exclusively offered at auction that year to benefit the Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson's Research, each pair of original Nike Mags fetched thousands of dollars. While the 2011 version did not include the self-lacing technology as seen in the movie, it included light-up features on the strap, heel and midsole.

In 2016, Nike perfected real power lacing technology, and released the Mag once again – also sold to benefit the Michael J. Fox Foundation for Parkinson’s Research (pictured right). With only 89 pairs produced, the self-lacing version was much more limited than the 2011 release and even more special due to the power-lacing feature and extreme rarity.

TRAVIS SCOTT X AIR JORDAN 4 ‘FRIENDS & FAMILY’ COLLECTION

Designed by multi-platinum rapper Travis Scott, this collection features some of the most sought-after sneakers in recent years, including four unreleased ‘Friends and Family’ versions of Scott’s Air Jordan 4 “Cactus Jack” design. The group is comprised of the highly coveted purple suede edition, two versions of the “Mocha” colorway (pictured left); and a preliminary version of the blue colorway without the speckled detailing on the plastic lacing and heel tabs of the version released at retail.

The group of unreleased ‘Friends and Family’ versions also included an original retail version, for a total of five highly sought-after items.

OPEN FOR BIDDING THROUGH 23 JULY

The Nike “Moon Shoe” is one of the most significant artifacts in the history of the multi-billion dollar athletic brand. One of only a handful of pairs known to exist, the present pair is a handmade running shoe designed by Nike co-founder and legendary Oregon University track coach Bill Bowerman. As the famous story goes, Bowerman was first inspired to create the innovative waffle sole traction pattern found on the brand’s early running shoes by tinkering with his wife’s waffle iron and pouring rubber into the mold to create the first prototype of the sole. Made for runners at the 1972 Olympic Trials, only about 12 pairs of the Moon Shoes were created, with even fewer still remaining today. The sneaker is the only pair known to exist in unworn condition.
